Highlights from the Anthology of Chess Combinations

Zdenko Krnic Editor-in-Chief

The third edition of the Anthology of Chess Combinations will be available by the end of August, and the new edition features several major changes introduced by the Chess Informant Editorial Board. The main one being that it has been divided into two main parts: educative and practical examples. As a foundation for the first part, the previous edition of the Anthology has been used with our original classification keys pertaining to fundamental tactical motifs. All the material inherited from the previous edition underwent rigorous re-examination by critically-minded experts from the Editorial Board armed with top-level computer engines to ensure the high-quality of the examples.

The second part has been produced to incorporate the elements of a workbook with some of the more recent examples divided into three groups to maintain a clear-cut structure. Each group has three levels of difficulty without any classification keys, thereby prohibiting the prospective solver from benefiting from any hints. Our editors also opted to omit a number of old examples for newer, more challenging brain teasers.

The big names are included, of course, but even more interesting are their annotations to the games, as they produce an excellent testimony to the depth of some extraordinary ideas that could otherwise have been left unnoticed. We hope that the third edition of the Anthology of Chess Combinations will help readers develop a greater appreciation for the art of combinative chess and a fundamental understanding of how it can be achieved. I have chosen four examples from the rich treasury of material, which will confirm that the efforts of the Chess Informant Editors will receive a positive response from the readers.

The position below could have appeared in the 23rd game of the Karpov – Kasparov match in 1986. After an extraordinary queen sacrifice, I. Zaitsev, Karpov's trainer at the time, showed that upon 8.Rh7 the best possibility for Black would be to find salvation in a weaker ending with two knights vs. the bishop pair.

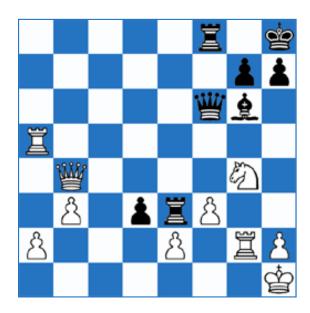

Karpov - Kasparov London/Leningrad (m/23) 1986 — 42/39*

1. Qe6!! Ke6 [1... Kf8 2. Bd5 and White is winning; I. Zaitsev] 2. Bd5 Kf5 3. Rf3 Kg4 [3... Kg5 4. Bc1 Kh5 5. Rf4 Bf6 (5... g5 6. Bf7 Kh6 7. Rh4 mate) 6. Rh4 Bh4 7. Bf3 mate; I. Zaitsev] 4. Rf4 Kg5 [4... Kh5 5. Rh4 Kg5 6. f4 Kf5 7. e4 mate; I. Zaitsev] 5. Bg7 [with the idea 6. h4 Kh5 7. Bf3 mate; 5. Bc1?? Bb2 and Black is winning] Ne5 6. Rh4 [with the idea 7. Bh6 Kf6 8. Rf4 mate, 7. f4 Kf5 8. e4 mate] Ne3! 7. Be6 Rf8 8. Rh7 [with the idea h4 mate] Chess is a magical game and this was confirmed when I found a unique defense for Black: 8...Ng2!! [8... Nf5 9. f4 Kg4 10. Rh4 mate; 8... Rf4 9. h4 Rh4 10. Rh4 Qf8 11. f4 Qf4 12. gf4 Kh4 13. Bc8 and White is superior; I. Zaitsev] 9. Kg2 Rf2! 10. Kf2 Ng4 11. Kg1 Nh2 12. Kh2 Black's great sacrifice of material has destroyed White's dangerous f- and h-pawns, and now White has to find out how to hold a draw. The idea is 13.Rh4 as Black cannot stop Rg4-h4 with perpetual check. 12... Rc5 13. Rh4 Rf5 Black covered the h3-c8 diagonal, but after 14. Kh3 perpetual check is unavoidable. [Z. Krnic]

I first met Vladimir Kramnik at the Dortmund tournament in 1992. With his brilliant performance in the Open tournament and subsequent meteoric rise, he announced his entrance into the elite of world chess. During that same year he won the tournament in Chalkidiki ahead of Lautier. Their individual game was published in Informant 55/23 with annotations by Kramnik. After many adventures, the game ended in a draw, but he estimated the position below as winning for Black. Now IM Sasa Velickovic has shown that White can force a perpetual check with 4.Nd5.

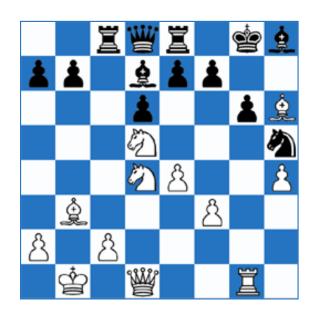

Lautier – Kramnik Chalkidiki 1992 — 55/23

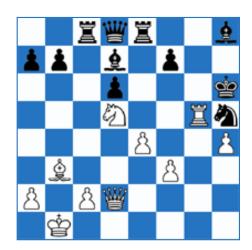

1... de2! 2. Ne3 Qf3 3. Re5 Rd8! [3... Qf1?? 4. Rg1 Qf2 5. Qe1 and White is winning; Lautier – Kramnik] 4. Nd5! [4. h4 Qh3 5. Kg1 Rd1 6. Kf2 e1Q 7. Qe1 Qh4 and Black is winning; 4. Rd5 Re8! (4... Qf1 5. Rg1 Qf3 6. Rg2 Qf1 equal) 5. Qe1 Qe3 6. Rdg5 Rc8! 7. R5g3 Qe4! and Black is winning, with the idea Rc1 Kramnik] Qf1 [4... Rc8 5. Qf4 Qd5 6. h3 Rc1 7. Qc1 Qe5 8. Qe1] 5. Rg1 Qf3 equal [Sa. Velickovic]

We can immediately recognize the position below as arising from the Sicilian Dragon. The game was annotated for Informant by grandmaster Rowson, who mentioned only 21.f4 Kh7 with winning position for Black. Yet, while working on the manuscript for Informant 84, IM Ivan Markovic, an expert in the Dragon Variation, felt that some good attacking possibilities for White were hidden in the position. After 1.Rg6! Kh7 2.Rg5 Kh6 3.Qd2 e6 we reach a critical position where he shows that 4.Rh5 leads to equality, while 4.Ne2 leads to a superior position for White. In rechecking this example for the new edition of the Anthology of Chess Combinations, he found a brilliant winning combination for White. Namely, 4.Nf5! ef5 5.Rf5 Kg6 6.Rg5 Kh6 and from the following analyses we can see that the position is hopeless for Black.

Rowson – j. Shahade Reykjavik 2002 – 84/183*

This is a critical moment from a game played at the Aeroflot tournament last year. In the annotations, published in Informant 90/86, grandmaster Magomedov estimates that the position is winning for White after 3.Rd3. However, Chess Informant Editor IM Sasa Velickovic gives a detailed analysis proving that instead of 5...Bd7?? Black could defend his position by playing 5...Kf7, etc.
